"Anything in Hardware"

Newberry's Hardware Co.

MENTIONS NEW NEWBERRY BLOCK

Omaha Trade Exhibit Comments on
Erection of Fine Building by
C. A. Newberry, Alliance

An important building improvement for Alliance, Nebr., is the Newberry Hardware company building now under construction. It is too an important factor in the growth and development of the Newberry Hardware company and marks the success and progress of that company in western Nebraska and surrounding territory. The new structure is an attractive three-story brick building with full basement, 50x140 feet, and is expected to be ready for occupancy November 1. The third and top floors will be occupied by the company's harness factory, while the second and first floors will be used for general display and sales-rooms respectively. The basement will be used for storage of new material and stock. The Newberry Hardware company does an extensive business in wholesale hardware, harness, saddlery, steel tanks and other lines, and the new building with their present three-story warehouse and tank factory will give much additional floor space in which to handle the rapidly growing trade.

Silo Makes Feeding Cheaper

The Nebraska Farmer: Two years ago my father and I decided that something must be done to reduce the cost of wintering cattle, for we could no longer afford to raise a large amount of roughness on high priced Nemaha county, Kansas, land. So we decided to try the silo route. We bought a stave silo 14x30 feet in dimensions, and before putting it up we dug a pit six feet deep. That makes the silo hold about 125 tons. Adjoining this silo we built a cow barn 32x64 feet. One-half of the barn contains stanchions for twenty cows and the remaining space is for loose cattle.

The first load of cattle we bought consisted of fifty-five two-year-old heifers. We fed this load for ninety-five days. For the first sixty days we fed shredded fodder and silage, but we finished the cattle on silage and shelled corn. We cleared $50 after paying for the silo and barn. It required 100 acres of corn to fill the silo last fall, but in an average year twenty acres will fill it to the roof. Last winter we did not try to fatten cattle, but we roughed twenty head of cattle and fourteen horses through on silage and wheat straw. We never had stock go through the winter in better condition.

We fed silage to our milch cows after they were running on pasture up to their knees, and we could not see but what they relished the silage as much as they did in the winter. We have both silage and alfalfa, but the cattle will leave alfalfa any time to eat silage. For a farmer that wants to get the dollar, which we are all after, I think silage and alfalfa make a good combination. Some of my neighbors paid enough for roughness last winter to build a good silo.

W. E. GEREN,
Nemaha County, Kans.

OBITUARY

Daisy M. Heath was born in Madison county, Nebraska, Oct. 16, 1882, and departed this life Sunday evening, Aug. 30, 1914, in Colorado Springs, Colo., at the age of 31 years 10 months and 14 days. In childhood years, she came with her parents to Box Butte county, where she grew to young womanhood. Four years ago she went to Omaha and took the training course for nurses. Later while following her profession in Superior, Nebr., she met and was united in marriage to William Keithley of that city, Dec. 12, 1911. She was by nature a gentle and lovable character. Daisy Heath as a girl or woman was loved by all who knew her. She had a strong constitution, and was the picture of health. She contracted a severe cold while caring for a tubercular patient, which in time developed into and was pronounced the same dread disease, last March. She declined rapidly and in May last came home to Alliance, to be with her mother, with the hope that this climate would restore her. Continuing to fail she went to the sanitarium in Colorado Springs, where specialists of her trouble gave her every attention, but human skill could do nothing for her. There was much suffering the last two weeks, but her patience and fortitude through it all was remarkable. The end came quietly and peacefully Sunday evening, while husband and nurse watched by her side.

She became a member of the Methodist church two years ago, in Superior, Nebr. The near relatives who survive her are her husband and mother, one brother, Charles Heath, three sisters, Mrs. Ed Curry, Anna and Essie Heath, and two children by a former marriage, Claud E. and Mabel E. Miller.

OBITUARY

(By Herald Correspondent). Ellsworth, Nebr., Aug. 24—The untimely death of a popular young man of this vicinity, George W. DeBorde, occurred seven miles south of Ellsworth at the ranch of Mr. Adams. Death was caused by a lightning stroke traveling along the wire and entering his body when he opened a wire gate. Every means known to medical science was used but to no avail.

George was one of the best horse-men in the state and a great lover of dumb animals. He had many friends and no enemies. The floral contributions at his funeral were many and beautiful. He leaves a father, mother and two sisters, Mrs. Gustaf Sandoz and Mrs. Moyer. He was aged seventeen years, six months and twenty-eight days.
